Partnership proposal

Community health rooted in Uganda

Prepared for the Jay Shetty partnerships and impact team

Community Reach outreach session

FairBanks Medical Centre, Kampala

FairBanks Medical Centre is a community health organisation in Kampala. We combine clinical care, Community Reach, and FCHIP - our community health intelligence platform. We are developing an FCHIP MVP to help families get care earlier and closer to home. This brief invites a conversation with the Jay Shetty ecosystem about shared goals around wellbeing, compassion, and practical impact.

Why this partnership matters

For Jay Shetty's team

- A grounded story from a working clinic and community programmes in Uganda
- A practical partner for wellbeing themes - care, prevention, and family health
- A clear route from message to community work you can point to

For FairBanks

- Help telling our story to a wider audience
- Advice and introductions within the impact and wellbeing space
- Support as we develop the FCHIP MVP

For communities we serve

- Stronger outreach and CHW / VHT support
- Care nearer home, including CHIS where families need it
- Earlier help when health risks start to rise

Project summary

FairBanks is asking to explore a partnership with the Jay Shetty ecosystem. We already run a medical centre and Community Reach programmes in Kampala peri-urban communities, and we are developing an FCHIP MVP - our community health intelligence platform. We are looking for collaborators who care about wellbeing in practice - not only as a message, but as better access to care.

What FairBanks is building

- FairBanks Medical Centre - clinical care in Kampala
- Community Reach - CHWs/VHTs, outreach, school health, CHIS, and livelihoods
- FCHIP MVP in development - tools that help teams see risk earlier using community, facility, GIS, and climate data
- A partnership focused on shared purpose: storytelling, field delivery, and prevention

How we see the collaboration

Area	Detail
Jay Shetty ecosystem	Platform, storytelling reach, and connections in wellbeing and impact
FairBanks	Operating clinic, Community Reach work, FCHIP MVP in development, and local relationships
Shared aim	Stronger community health outcomes linked to compassion and practical care
Next step	A brief introductory conversation with partnerships or impact

Care at the medical centre

Community members at an outreach session

1. Who FairBanks is

Medical Centre - clinical anchor in Kampala

Pharmacy - medicines beside the clinic

FairBanks is a community health organisation in Kampala. We provide primary care, run Community Reach programmes, and build FCHIP so families can get help earlier and closer to home. We believe good care should not depend on where someone lives or what they earn.

Our medical centre is where clinical care, outreach, and FCHIP meet. We test and improve ideas with the families we already serve before we ask others to use them.

Our three parts of work

FairBanks Medical Centre

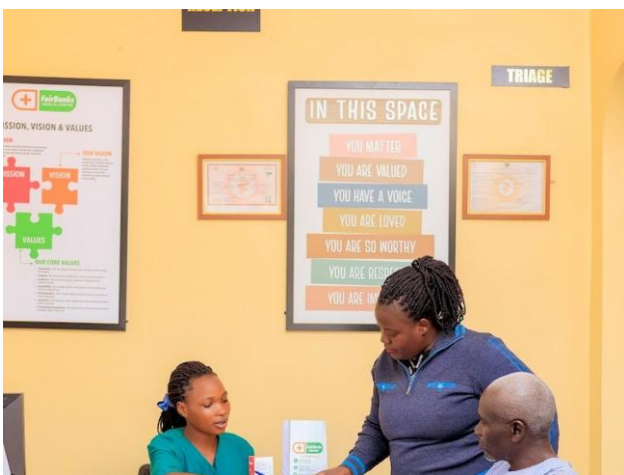

Quality family and community primary healthcare, diagnostics, pharmacy, and referrals.

FairBanks Community Reach

Outreach, health education, screening, maternal and child health, Gericare, school health, CHIS, and livelihoods.

FCHIP (Community Health Intelligence Platform)

An MVP in development - a platform that brings together community, facility, map, and climate signals so teams can act earlier.

Reception and triage with dignity

Gericare - support for older patients

2. How FairBanks works - Community Reach

FairBanks operates a six-step cascade with a continuous feedback loop. FCHIP sits on the Data & Feedback layer - the part of the model that helps us learn from the field and improve how we serve.

Community Reach - how the work connects

- Community members identify needs and own solutions
- CHWs / VHTs bridge homes, schools, and care

- Community Reach programmes deliver education, screening, and home visits
- FairBanks Medical Centre anchors clinical care and quality
- Research, partnerships, and skills strengthen evidence and capacity
- Economic empowerment (including CHIS and IGAs) supports resilient families

3. The problem FCHIP helps address

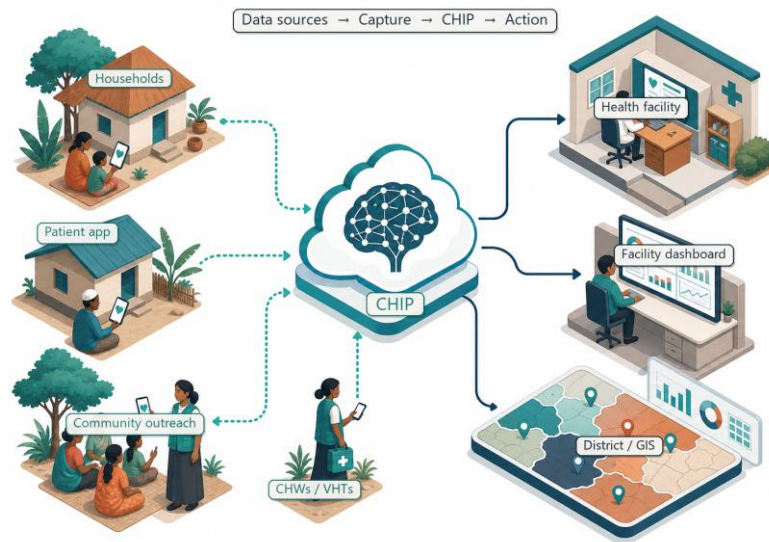

Blood-pressure screening in the community

Medical camp care beyond clinic walls

Primary healthcare in underserved communities is still largely reactive. Facilities often see people only after illness appears. Data from CHWs, schools, outreach, clinics, and pharmacies stays fragmented. Climate signals rarely join the picture. Clinical records often remain locked inside facility EMR/HMS systems - so the continuous feedback loop cannot learn fast enough to prevent outbreaks, maternal complications, or stock-outs.

FCHIP is FairBanks' technology platform. It connects community members, CHWs/VHTs, schools, communities, hospitals, and clinics; safely exposes data APIs to existing EMR/HMS systems for real-time clinical ingest; and fuses signals with GIS mapping and climate APIs to surface explainable early warnings and dashboards.

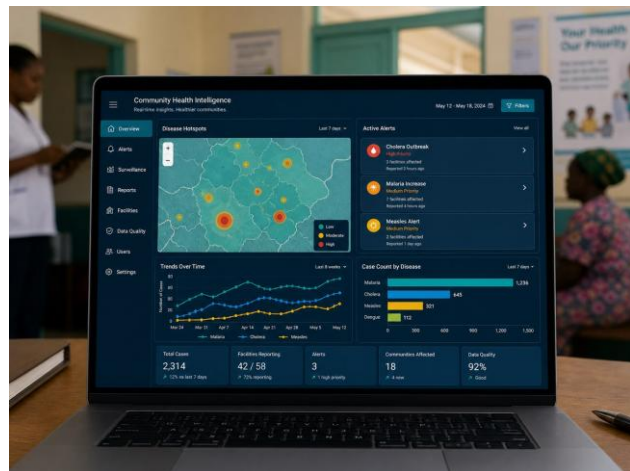

FCHIP flow: community and facility capture - intelligence - action for facilities and districts

What FCHIP includes

- Artificial intelligence and machine learning for risk scoring and early warning
- GIS mapping of disease and resource geography
- Climate API integration for climate-sensitive health risk
- Secure EMR/HMS data APIs (no rip-and-replace for clinics)
- Offline-capable mobile capture for CHWs/VHTs
- Cloud sync and analytics dashboards for facilities and partners

4. Where we are now

Community health education in progress

Maternal and family health support

What is already in place

- Operational FairBanks Medical Centre in Kampala
- Active Community Reach across Bukoto, Kyebando, Kisaasi, Kamwokya, Kikaaya, and surrounding communities
- CHW/VHT engagement, maternal and child health, Gericare, chronic-disease screening, school and corporate health
- CHIS and livelihood pathways linked to affordable access
- FCHIP MVP currently in development for structured field use and evidence building

Next steps on the roadmap

Stage	Status
Community healthcare model established	Completed
FairBanks Medical Centre operational	Completed
Community Reach platform operational	Completed

FCHIP MVP	In development
Structured pilot evidence & partner onboarding	Next phase
District and regional expansion	Future vision

Longer term, we want FairBanks to be known across Africa for community health intelligence that sits beside real clinics and community programmes - not as software alone.

5. Possible ways to work together

Compassion in the consulting room

Mothers and families in the clinic

Jay Shetty's public work centres on wellbeing, compassion, and stronger communities. FairBanks works on the same themes through clinics, outreach, and tools that help people get care earlier and closer to home.

Areas we would like to explore

- Community health and wellness programmes
- Preventive healthcare and health promotion
- Mental health and holistic wellbeing initiatives
- Artificial intelligence for social impact
- Digital health innovation and research exchange
- Global advocacy and storytelling
- Impact investment and philanthropic introductions
- Social enterprise growth and mentorship

What FairBanks offers

- An operating community medical facility in Kampala
- Community Reach work shaped by local needs and relationships
- FCHIP - an MVP we are developing for careful field validation
- Healthcare leadership and trusted community relationships
- A team focused on careful, lasting community health work

Closing

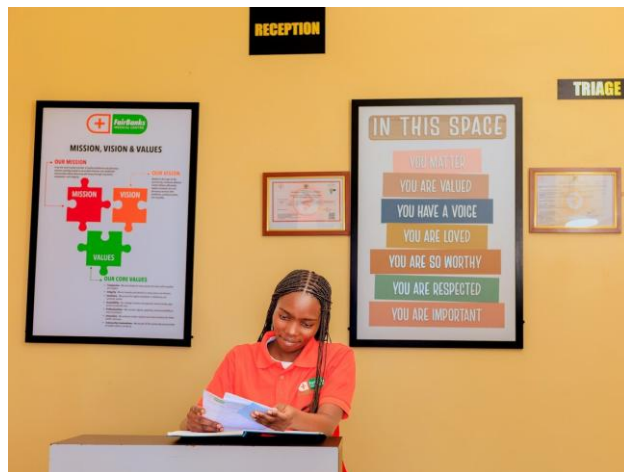

We would welcome a conversation about how the Jay Shetty ecosystem and FairBanks can work together on community health and wellbeing. As we develop the FCHIP MVP, we are looking for partners who can help share the story, offer advice, and open useful introductions.

If this feels aligned, we would be glad to start with a short call and see where a practical collaboration might fit.

Next step: a brief 10-minute introductory conversation with your partnerships or impact team.
